6 Infrastructure financing, development and construction law issues more generally

Catalyst Communications’ Managing Director, Sandy Thomas, has written extensively on these issues over the last 20 years. This has included the ‘ghosting’ for a leading national law firm of a regular column in a well-known monthly construction industry publication. Issues addressed have included:

- Reform of tendering practices
- The pros and cons of various BOOT, PPP, corporatisation and privatisation structures
- PPP opportunities and risks
- Extending PPP beyond PFIs and other privately financed projects
- Risk management in BOOT projects
- Project financing issues and interactions with contract structures
- Project financing under traditional and capital markets approaches
- Taxation obstacles to private sector investment in infrastructure
- New models for joint infrastructure development
- Initiation and tendering of private infrastructure
- Infrastructure opportunities and risks in Asia
- Opportunities and risks in fast-tracking major infrastructure projects
- Assessments of ‘value for money’ and ‘price’
- ‘Costs’ in ‘cost plus’ contracts
- The value of bank guarantees
- ‘Good faith’ in Australian and SE Asian construction contracting

- Fairness standards in public sector tenders
- New approaches to project-specific construction contracting
- Contract structures adopted by the Department of Defence
- Future development of standard form construction industry contracts
- EPC/EPCM contract structures
- Certainty issues arising from the ‘corporatisation’ of government agencies
- Tenders for outsourcing
- Insurance issues in construction contracting
- Risk management through capital market mechanisms
- Infrastructure financing risk management
- Equitable setting off
- Trends in risks for professionals in the construction industry
- Trends in professional liability
- Liabilities for purely economic losses
- The capping of professional liabilities
- Unintended consequences of ‘side agreements’
- Techniques for the protection of financiers against owner and builder failures
- Current barriers to cost and dispute reduction
- Contractor and subcontractor accreditation
- Contractual and tort issues for cascading liabilities for defective work
- ‘Pay when paid’ clauses
- The ‘matching’ of head contract and subcontract obligations and liabilities
- ‘Preventive acts’ and extensions of time
- New approaches to ‘relationship’ contracting in general
- Interactions between ‘partnering’ and contracts
- ‘Alliance’ contracting approaches, issues and pitfalls
- DC&M contracting approaches
- Partnering approaches and securities
- Ethical values in the construction industry
- Impacts of legal ethics on construction industry delays and expense
- Legal professional privilege in the construction and projects industry
- Discovery and admissibility of documents
- Intellectual property issues in tenders and contracts
- Moral rights and copyright in the construction industry
- Environmental risks for owners and councils
- Native title and major projects
- The enforceability of ADR clauses
- ADR trends, pros and cons
- Options for simplified arbitration
- Arbitration and bias issues
- The ‘clogging’ of ADR
- The comparative merits of arbitration and binding expert determination

7 Other (and generally earlier) projects on employment/unemployment, labour market, higher education, training, urban planning, public health, aged care, social security, administrative law and taxation/child support issues

In recent years, primarily as a result of the dominance of ‘repeat business’ but also as a matter of deliberate choice, Catalyst Communications has focussed strongly on infrastructure development and transport issues.

In earlier years, especially between 1989 and 1994, the focus of Catalyst Communications was more on employment/unemployment, labour market, higher education, training, urban planning, energy efficiency, environmental, public health, aged care, social security, administrative law and taxation/child support issues.

Since 1994 a few projects of these types—many of which cannot be disclosed—have continued to be carried out each year, and following changes in government philosophies and policies at the federal level Catalyst Communications is now once again actively pursuing its interests in these fields, while also continuing its work in infrastructure fields.

Examples of projects of these types, for public sector clients, have included, in addition to projects in these fields already mentioned in sections 4 and 5 above,

- Editing of new Australian Capital Territory Housing Strategy (ACT Department of Urban Services, 1998)
- Editing and assistance in drafting of new Australian Capital Territory Strategic Plan (Chief Minister’s Department, ACT Government, 1996)
- Review of Commonwealth merits review tribunals: Design, development, implementation and reporting of a major qualitative survey of clients, advocates, interest groups, members and staff of Commonwealth agencies, departments, tribunals and courts involved in administrative law ‘merits review’ of agency and department decisions, from internal review processes to the Administrative Appeals Tribunal, specialist tribunals (especially in the immigration, refugee and veterans’ arenas) and the Federal Court (for Artcraft Research and the Administrative Review Council, 1994–95)
- Promotion of ‘Working Nation’ initiatives: with Artcraft Research, an evaluation of and strategic guidance on proposals for advertising ‘Working Nation’ (Employment White Paper) initiatives to employers, coupled with an evaluation of contemporary employer, long-term unemployed and general public attitudes on economic and employment issues and the former Commonwealth Employment Service (CES) (Commonwealth Department of Employment, Education and Training (DEET), 1994)
- Local government administrative reforms: Administrative services coordination and management for Waverley City Council in response to changed operations and responsibilities under a new NSW Local Government Act (Waverley City Council, 1994)
- CES environmental, program and performance reporting: extensive database analyses and development of new monthly reporting mechanisms and formats on Commonwealth Employment Service (CES) client characteristics, numbers and trends and trends in CES performance (job placements and labour market program commencements and outcomes), plus analysis of the implications of performance findings for new programs directed at reducing long-term unemployment (DEET, 1993)
- Competency-based training in community services and health: drafting and preparation of introductory print materials for employees in the community services and health industries, promoting the introduction of competency-based training and explaining its key concepts and modes of implementation (National Community Services and Health Industry Training Advisory Board, 1993–94)
- The Job Report: concept development, research, writing and production of the first ten of a new series of monthly reports on the nature, performance and outcomes of CES services for jobseekers and employers, labour market programs, student financial assistance programs, industry training programs and higher education services, plus analyses of CES and other DEET data for the following six editions and strategic advice and assistance on disseminating and promoting the availability of this information (DEET, 1992–94)
- Development of client and staff communications strategies for ‘benefits control’ activities and client responsibilities under the AUSTUDY and ABSTUDY and Assistance for Isolated Children student assistance schemes (DEET, 1993)
- Concept development, research, writing and production of a Job search kit of leaflets, booklets and a video for distribution to all persons registering for employment with the Commonwealth Employment Service, to improve ‘self help’ job search skills and awareness and use of

CES services, plus consumer research, revision, expansion, pre-testing and production of an upgraded version of this kit, 1.5 million copies of which were distributed (DEET, 1991–92)

- Review of DEET public communications services (DEET, January–February 1992)
- Design and conduct of a survey of internal staff and client attitudes to the services of DEET’s Management Division, and subsequent mediation and facilitation in development and implementation of responses to the survey’s findings (DEET, 1991–92)
- Review of DEET communication strategies on higher education issues and data access services for university and other academics, students, industry groupings and others (DEET, 1991–92)
- ‘Disability Reform Package’: development of a major, baseline study by Artcraft Research among people with disabilities, parents and carers, welfare agencies, health professionals and employers and employees, and analysis of the strategic implications of the study’s findings (Department of Social Security (DSS), Department of Health, Housing and Community Services and DEET, 1991)
- Strategic planning for the future design, implementation, monitoring and evaluation of labour market programs for disadvantaged and long-term unemployed clients of the CES and related SkillShare, self-employment, Aboriginal employment and Aboriginal education programs (DEET, 1991)
- Design, development and implementation of staff communications and training strategies and programs associated with the introduction of new staffing systems within the CES, in an extremely sensitive industrial relations climate (DEET, 1991)
- Case study reviews of Youth Access Centres and DEET youth services (DEET, with Artcraft Research, 1991)
- Review of the marketing (to clients, other external targets and staff) of labour market programs aimed at assisting both employers and unemployed people (DEET, 1990)
- Advice on external and internal communications to facilitate the introduction (in July 1991) and further development of the ‘Newstart’ Strategy, under which the unemployment benefit was replaced by income support measures tied to job search and training program requirements for unemployed people (DEET, 1990–91)
- Evaluation of service-provider attitudes to and services for people with disabilities (with Artcraft Research, for DSS, DEET and Department of Community Services and Health, 1990)
- Review of the ‘JOBTRAIN’ program of pre-vocational and vocational training for unemployed persons, administered by the CES (with Artcraft Research, for DEET, 1990)
- National Better Health Program, Stage 1: communications assistance and advice to Commonwealth and State/Territory participants, including the establishment of an agreed broad communications strategy and the commencement of projects within this strategy (Department of Community Services and Health, 1989–90)
- Preparation of a paper proposing, explaining and arguing (in principle and in detail) for proposed national competency standards under a new Metal and Engineering Industry Award, as a follow-up to earlier work in related but wider workplace restructuring fields for private sector clients (Australian Committee on TAFE Curriculum, for the Metal Trades Industry Association and the Metal Trades Federation of Unions, 1989)
- Child Support Scheme – Stage 1 Handbook: Research, consulting, drafting and final preparation of a handbook with detailed advice for social workers, welfare advisers, DSS and Child Support Agency staff, lawyers, etc on the operation of Stage 1 of the Child Support Scheme, designed to minimise operational difficulties inherent in the Stage 1 scheme and improve client servicing by DSS/CSA staff (DSS, 1989)
- Review of strategies for improved community awareness and appreciation of Commonwealth Government housing assistance, including the First Home Owners Scheme and the Commonwealth-State Housing Agreement, and the likely impacts of then-contemplated changes to Commonwealth schemes. (Department of Community Services and Health, Housing Review Secretariat, 1989)
- Communications strategies on aged persons’ care, services and rights: Community, resident and operator consultations and a review of Commonwealth communications programs aimed at reaching current and possible future residents of hostels and nursing homes and their relatives, leading to a report with strategic recommendations for subsequently implemented programs (Department of Community Services and Health, 1989)
- Rights of residents in nursing homes and hostels: assistance in drafting a report by consultant Chris Ronalds, I’m Still an Individual: a blueprint for the rights of residents in nursing homes and hostels, and national publicity for the launch and follow-up round of community consultations on this report, which ultimately led to wide-ranging new protections of residents’ rights (Department of Community Services and Health, 1989)
- Publicity for new protections of hostel residents’ financial rights and hostel funding arrangements (Department of Community Services and Health, 1988)

- Nursing home funding changes: Initially a fire-fighting exercise in the face of a wave of adverse publicity about new funding arrangements, especially in Victoria and South Australia; successfully turned around to favourable publicity and widespread acceptance of the new arrangements, through a combination of media, consultation, publicity and lobbying techniques (Department of Community Services and Health, 1988)
- Child Support Scheme – Stage 1: National program aimed at facilitating and maximising ultimate support for the introduction of Stage 1 of the Child Support Scheme, including a report on inherent and avoidable problems with the scheme and its implementation, and recommended alternatives for the introduction of Stage 2. (Australian Taxation Office/DSS/Attorney-General’s Department, 1988).
